The Bank of Thailand issued a new polymer 20 baht note on 24 March 2022.

The face of the note shows King Maha Vajiralongkorn (Rama X) in his Royal Thai Air Force uniform. The back includes images of Rama I and Rama II. The note measures 138 by 72mm, and features a dummy (printed) security strip with microtext ('20 Baht' in Latin and Thai letters). The shadow image depicts King Rama X. There are two transparent windows on the right-hand side (visible from both sides of the note). The upper window contains several small embossed numbers '20', while the lower window has a large gold number '20'. This window turns pink/red when tilted.

Note from the expert:

The launch of the new note marks a transition to polymer of the most widely used denomination in Thailand. Although the size and design of the new (polymer) 20 baht note has not changed from its paper predecessor, it includes advanced security features. The old paper notes will continue to hold the status of legal tender.
